In last year's letter I discussed the upward trending local economy and the positive signs of growth which is now powering new business expansions and locations that have decreased the unemployment rate from a high of 18% in 2011 to 7% in 2016. The recovery is now complete.

This robust economic expansion can be credited to the staffs of San Joaquin County and its seven communities planning ahead during the recession while working with property owners to zone, entitle and attract developers/contractors to build spec industrial, logistics and commercial buildings. The result is San Joaquin County has now completed or has under construction over 19 million sq. ft. of new buildings since 2013. Not including temporary construction jobs, these 46 new buildings will house 9,000 new jobs.

In addition to buildings, San Joaquin County now has the largest industrial park and biggest spec building project in Northern California. Prologis International Park of Commerce, a 1800 acre fully entitled, master-planned industrial/logistics park located in Tracy as well as the largest spec industrial building project of 1.7 million sq. ft. in 3 buildings now under construction in Stockton at NorCal Logistics Park will continue the attraction of new employers in the next 10 years.

Development like these has made San Joaquin USA the go to location for expanding businesses with the Nor Cal Mega Region. San Joaquin USA is rapidly becoming the new employment center for the Northern San Joaquin Region by providing both a job and a home for growing families.

What's driving this growth? One major technology trend is online purchasing and the growth of the logistical e-commerce supply. Of course the location of Amazon in January, 2013 started this trend and has made transportation and logistics the fastest growing industry in San Joaquin County. Amazon has absorbed over 2.6 million sq. ft. in 3 buildings and has established a major air cargo hub at Stockton Metro Airpark with daily flights by three Prime Air 767 aircrafts. Meanwhile UPS, FedEx, Medline and others have followed Amazon's lead with completion of major expansions over the past 4 years. In the future 3-D and additive manufacturing processes will move into these E-fulfillment supply chain centers.

A second major trend is the regional location of autonomous electric vehicles R&D, manufacturers and suppliers. Company facilities are locating from Fremont to Sparks, NV and down the Central Valley to Los Angeles. Of course, Tesla began renovations on a 431,000 square foot facility that was once utilized by Daimler-Chrysler as a distribution center in April 2014 and has continued to expand since then. Suppliers will follow.

All traditional local businesses including agriculture, food processing, specialty manufacturing and traditional warehousing are following this technology trend rapidly adopting advances to stay competitive and to access new markets with product and service adaptations.

In closing it's important to keep our teamwork and business friendly welcome mat out to attract new employers that will bring higher paying jobs. As major employers in the Bay Area and Silicon Valley face higher costs of doing business, commuter congestion and limited land and buildings they will look at our opportunity to put jobs adjacent to affordable housing in San Joaquin USA.

TIME MONEY.

And how the Port of Stockton helps your business save on both.

SHIP INLAND. SHIP STOCKTON.

Delays can be costly. You won't find them at the Port of Stockton. We're a centrally located, 35-foot deep-water port with none of the congestion and waits that typically conspire to slow you down. And with direct access to rail, freeways, distribution, and storage, your cargo keeps moving fast. And forward. Learn why the Port makes sense for your business.

- Over the next 12 months, real gross state product is forecast to grow 2.9% and the risk of recession is low.
- The California unemployment rate is about 5% and is forecast to stabilize just below 5% for the next three years. The labor force and number employed are projected to grow at 1% annual rate through 2020.
- Nonfarm payroll jobs will grow 1.5% over the next 12 months, about half the pace of the previous four years when job growth was between 2.5% and 3%. Payroll growth will decline further to 1% by 2020, which is to be expected for an economy near full employment.
- Health Services has become the largest employment sector in the state, and is projected to add about 40,000 positions over the next 12 months, less than the 65,000 jobs added in recent years.
- Professional Scientific & Technical Services is a high-paying sector that has fueled the recovery.
 Growth in this sector will slow to 22,000 jobs over the next year compared to over 50,000 in some recent years as Silicon Valley growth cools.
- Growing tourism and a gradual shift in consumer spending from retail to restaurants has fueled rapid growth in Leisure and Hospitality sector. However, this sector's growth is slowing to 30,000 new jobs over the next 12 months, and will drop below 20,000 new jobs by 2020 as higher minimum wages lead to slower hiring.
- State and local government employment will be one of the slowest growing sectors, projected at about 0.5% job growth over the next several years as state and local governments grapple with rising pension costs.
- Construction activity continues to grow with about 35,000 new jobs anticipated in each of the next three years, about a 4% annual growth rate.
- Single family housing starts are picking up, growing from 50,000 units in 2016 to a projected 60,000 in 2017 and 78,000 by 2020. Multi-family production is projected to exceed 50,000 units in 2017, and reach 60,000 units by 2021. Despite this improvement, housing production will be insufficient to relieve the state's growing housing shortage.
- California's population growth rate has declined to 0.7% and is projected to remain below 1% due to lower birth rates, immigration, and housing costs. The state will add about 280,000 residents in each of the next few years, notably fewer than in the past.

Greater Silicon Valley Brand

The Partnership under the management of part-time consultant Randy Starbuck has continued its collaboration with San Joaquin County and the communities to market into Silicon Valley using the "Greater Silicon Valley" brand which was created in 2013.

This marketing and sales call program partners with TiE Silicon Valley, Joint Venture Silicon Valley, California Technology Council and other organizations with the following primary goals:

 Attract new investment and expanding Silicon Valley startups, technology firms, manufacturers, suppliers and logistics companies into San Joaquin communities.
 Examples include Amazon and Tesla and its suppliers. Continue to connect San Joaquin County entrepreneurs and startups with Silicon Valley mentor services (TIE Silicon Valley), funding sources, and talent to hire while providing the opportunity to sell services and products into Silicon Valley.

Events, Exhibition & Outreach

- Joint Venture Silicon Valley State of the Valley Conference (Santa Clara, CA - 10 local community representatives and marketing table hosted by City of Tracy, Cafe Coop & SJ Partnership)
- Annual TiECon Sponsorship/ Marketing Booth(Santa Clara, CA -(Cities of Tracy & Manteca community representatives & 3 startups)
- Gateway to Growth Marketing
 Insert paper and digital (Supported by local communities, developers, airport, port and other advertisers).

 Paper insert in Silicon Valley Business
 Journal and San Francisco Business
 Times issues plus digital online placement on business journal's web sites. Paper overrun for community marketing distribution at events, conferences and prospect packages.

 Placed on San Joaquin Partnership's and Greater Silicon Valley web sites as PDF download.
- Multiple evening events, conferences and presentations within Silicon Valley, San Francisco and East
 Bay. Examples include the Churchill Club, California Technology
 Council - Economic Advisory Board member, Joint Venture Silicon Valley, and the Bay Area Council, THRIVE AgTech, Hardware Massive,
 FoodBytes, SME ~ Silicon Valley,
 Plug & Play and Keiretsu Forums.
- Weekly prospect visits to Silicon Valley, San Francisco and East

- Bay (Oakland/Berkeley/Emeryville) accelerators, co-working centers and Innovation Hubs to introduce startup/young tech companies to San Joaquin business opportunities. First six months visited 10 startup facilities and met with 55 startup companies working in the logistics, manufacturing, construction, clean energy and agriculture/food processing sectors.
- Randy Starbuck began escorting city representatives to individual meetings with startup companies based on city staff availability (City of Tracy ~ June)

Business Retention & Expansion

Support Business Team San Joaquin, a collaboration of the San Joaquin County Economic Development Agency, community economic development leaders, EDD, and the San Joaquin Partnership. Business Team San Joaquin provides cooperative services to retain and grow local companies and holds informative bi-monthly team meetings. San Joaquin Partnership is on call to San Joaquin County Economic Development Agency and community economic development leaders to assist in retention and expansion of companies such as these past successful projects - Medline, Pearl Crop and TAP Plastics.

Retention calls are led by San Joaquin County Economic Development Agency and targets major employers, major retail sales generators and all expanding companies. San Joaquin County Economic Development Agency also is the response team that meets with companies closing or downsizing business operations and laying off employees.

Other Community Service Activities

In addition, Mike Ammann is involved in local community economic development planning and program discussions as commission member of the City of Stockton Development Oversight Commission, and the Stockton Metropolitan Airport Advisory Commission as well as a participant on the City of Lodi Brownfields Advisory Committee and an appointee of the project to connect ACE to BART with the Alameda-San Joaquin Regional Rail Working Group, along with being a founding member of the I Hub San Joaquin Board of Directors.

ocated less than 60 miles east of the Silicon Valley and the San Francisco Bay area, the City of Tracy is a growing community that offers a unique opportunity for your business to be active, innovative, and connected.

TRACY IS ACTIVE - Tracy offers a global supply chain with a strong economic base and exponential growth opportunities. Investor developers such as Prologis, DCT Industrial, Ridgeline Property Group have taken interest in this bustling community and have begun construction on more than 2± million square feet of spec building development with more in the pipeline. In fact, Tracy has experienced more than 4± million square feet of 2013. Total built industrial inventory is around 14± million square feet. The City of Tracy is ready for growth and provides expedited permitting services to meet the timing needs of your business.

TRACY IS INNOVATIVE - As part of the Greater Silicon Valley, the region draws from a labor shed of nearly 1 million people. Its resident workforce is educated and skilled in the technology sector, logistics, and advanced manufacturing. Although Tracy's historical roots are in agriculture and food processing, current industries range from traditional food processing to e-commerce fulfillment sophistication of medical to the device research and development.

TRACY IS CONNECTED - Tracy is the gateway to the San Francisco Bay

Area and the California Central Valley, which drives the opportunity to serve more than 14.5 million consumers with just-in-time delivery. A Tracy location offers access worked out great for to both the Port of Oakland and the Port of Stockton. Union Pacific Railroad and BNSF Railways intermodal facilities are located less than building space being constructed since 25 miles northeast of Tracy. Within 17 miles, the Stockton Metropolitan Airport serves Amazon Fulfillment operations in Tracy running multiple 767 Boeing air cargo deliveries to Amazon Prime customers each day. Interstate and freeway infrastructure adds to the mega regions multi-modal access needs for raw materials and product delivery.

State Growth Continues

California's economic growth has slowed from the nation-leading levels of recent years, but continues to expand at a steady rate. We project real gross state product to sustain its expansion at a 2.5% to 3.0% rate and payrolls to grow at about 1.5% rate for the next two years. The Trump administration has not been as disruptive to the healthcare system or international economy as initially feared, both of which are positive developments for California. Thus far, the political environment has featured a lot of noise and cultural conflict, but little in the way of substantive policy actions with significant economic impacts.

Near Term Uncertainties

That could change in the months ahead with tax reform and budget negotiations topping the fall policy agenda in Washington, and the President is weighing whether to reappoint Janet Yellen as chair of the Federal Reserve when her term expires this winter. This is an area to watch because a monetary policy mistake as the Fed continues its path towards normalizing interest rates is a significant risk to the forecast. There is also uncertainty on tax policy. While it seems that large tax cuts would be easy to pass with Republicans controlling Congress and the White House, the President may find it as politically challenging as healthcare reform due to vested interests and concerns about the federal debt. Thus, we are not anticipating any change to monetary policy and only incremental changes to tax policy. While the data points to a calm economic outlook, the political environment remains unpredictable, particularly at the global level where the North Korea nuclear crisis threatens.

Unemployment at Record Lows

In California, the unemployment rate is about 5% and is expected to remain at or slightly below this level over the next few years. Faster growth in California is constrained by the growing scarcity of skilled labor, and extreme housing costs that prevent faster growth to population and the work force.

State Moves to Reduce Housing Shortage

Housing affordability has become a crisis in California, and spurred the legislature to pass 15 housing related bills that the Governor signed in September. This package will provide a modest boost to housing construction in California. For example, we are now projecting 137,000 new housing units in 2020 compared to 132,000 in the May forecast. In 2017, we are expecting statewide housing starts to inch over 100,000 units for the first time since the Great Recession. This is still an insufficient supply to stop the upward pressure on rents and home prices. The most notable parts of the housing package are a $4 billion bond, and a new fee on recording real estate documents that is estimated to generate about $250 million in annual funding for affordable housing. Most of these funds will go towards subsidizing the construction of rent and income restricted apartments, and will modestly increase the chance of low-income households moving off the long-waiting list for these units. The best approach to stimulate production of market rate housing is reforming the allocation of property and sales taxes, so that new housing would be less of a financial drain on local governments. New local tax structures could also help restrain the growth of impact fees that tend to be fixed fees per unit which reduce the viability of developing smaller and more affordable apartments and single-family homes.
